

Update from RubiconMD

RubiconMD was recently informed that effective October 1, 2022 eConsults are no longer eligible for Category 1 CME credits. The AAFP recently shifted its stance on eConsults which resulted in this change.

We recognize that you may use the RubiconMD platform to help fulfill a portion of your CME credit requirements and apologize for any inconvenience that this may cause. You can still request CME credit for eConsults sent from 10/1/2021-9/30/2022. You can reach out to cme@rubiconmd.com with any questions.

We will continue to offer AAFP-accredited live and on-demand CME webinars. You can access them HERE.

We are exploring options with AAFP regarding potential retroactive reinstatement. In an effort to share the impact that eConsults have on patient care with the AAFP, from our user's perspective, we'd love your help by filling out this 2-minute survey:

We appreciate you as a RubiconMD partner as we work together to increase access to specialty expertise for your patients. We will be in touch soon with an update on the eConsult status with AAFP.

Thank you,

The RubiconMD Team
